The library's web page development has made significant strides this summer. Although the page is not yet on the Shelton State web site, almost all of the information needed to link to the web site has been given to Brad Moore, the webmaster. The library's web site will include the following sections:

- Circulation policies
- Database information
- Frequently Asked Questions
- Library Hours
- Staff Directory
- How to use Shelby
- Information about Dynix
- Favorite links
- Links to search engines
- Dial-access to Shelby
- Citing electronic and paper resources
- Information about the Fredd Library (pending)
- History of the libraries (pending)
- LBS schedule for current semester

All of the information regarding the above sections has been presented to Brad Moore (with the exception of those items still pending), and I am working on getting background and historical information on the Martin and Fredd libraries to complete the page. When Brad puts this information on the web site, I will ask all the members of the Web Page Team (and everyone else in the library) to review the information for accuracy, completeness, and so forth, and will entertain suggestions as to how we might improve the information, the look of the site, etc. I have included a link to the library's e-mail address (library@shelton.cc.al.us) for student comments and suggestions as well.
